Game Rules

1. You will need a dice for this game. If you do not have a physical dice, find a dice generator online.

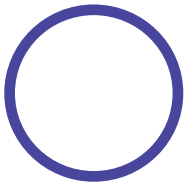

2. There are 4 different circles on the board and two different types of question cards.

Standard space. If you land here, nothing happens this turn.

This is a Waharoa spot. Each time you land here, the person to your right draws a card and asks you a question.

Move forwards on the board to the closest Waharoa spot.

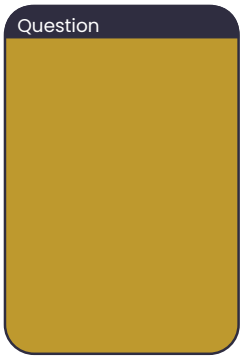

Move backwards on the board to the closest Waharoa spot.

The question appears here.

The answer appears here so you can cover it up if you need to.

Action Cards. These are cards where you are not given the answer. Players should answer the question, then search to see if they are correct.

3. Shuffle the standard cards and action cards together, place them on the Question Bank box.

4. Each player selects a token. The person who has most recently joined the public sector starts, moving clockwise from there.

5. Roll a dice and move across the board.

6. If you answer a question correctly, role again and move across the board. Each player can get one extra roll per turn (i.e., if you land on another Waharoa space and answer a question correctly, roll again on your next turn).

7. If you answer a question incorrectly, you must keep answering questions each turn until you get a correct answer.

8. Place all answered questions on the Discard Pile. If you run out of questions, shuffle the discard pile and add it to the Question Bank.

9. The game finishes when a player reaches the end and answers a final question correctly.

Conversation Cards

If there are more than 2 players, each player receives two Conversation Cards.

If a player is unsure of the answer, they can play this card. If the group answers correctly, everybody playing moves forward one space (including the person who asked the question, however they cannot help the group). The person playing a Conversation Card can also contribute to the discussion.

If, as a result, a player lands on a Waharoa space, that player answers their question on their next turn without rolling. If they land on a coloured circle then move forwards or backwards as directed and answers a question on their next turn.
